Repeated Reading

Time yourself reading the passage each night for one minute and keep track of how many correct words per minute you read. Record your reading below.

Every June, the Pueblo Indians of the San Juan Pueblo in New Mexico hold a big gathering. They call it Feast Day. It is a time of food and fun. It is also the time when Curt and his grandfather Andy will dance. So will the other members of Curt's tribe, the Tewas.

Each Tewa dance is special. It is also a prayer. The dancers pray for good crops. They dance to cure the sick and to show respect for the earth. They also dance to show they are thankful for rain, rainbows and all living things.

On Feast Day Andy and Curt put on face paint and costumes. They rush to the plaza in the center of town. That is where the Tewas dance. Drums pound, bells jingle, and drummers sing. Young and old move to the drum beats. As soon as they can walk, Tewa children learn to dance. They dance proudly and with honor, just as the men and women do. At lunch people go home for a big feast. Then they dance again until the sun sets.

Andy has taught Curt and the other young Tewas the dances of their ancestors. Curt knows his grandfather is wise. He is proud to dance for rain and for rainbows.

My goal is to read at least 110 words per minute with 0-2 errors.

This is what I did:
